

Pear Tree Primary School

Newsletter 3- 19.09.25

What another fantastic week in school! This week Mr Trude in Violet Class shared his favourite book with the children during our new 'Wednesday Book Club'. This love for reading inspired excitement across the school, with our smallest pears in Red Class continuing to visit our school library to choose a book to share with their loved ones at home. We were also delighted to welcome Red Class parents into school for a phonics meeting, giving them the opportunity to see how we teach reading and share strategies to support their children at home.

NURTURE

This week in our Nurture provision we have focused on the story Alfie Gives a Hand by Shirley Hughes. Using this story as a starting point, children explored key social and emotional objectives such as recognising times when people might need help, identifying how it feels to help and be helped, and understanding what it means to be a good friend. Sessions gave pupils the chance to practise sharing and taking turns, cooperating and following instructions, and trying new activities with support. We also encouraged them to recognise everyday situations where they can be brave, building their confidence and resilience while reinforcing positive, supportive relationships.

During these sessions, the children have been busy creating crafts and taking part in activities that celebrate their learning. They made Bravery Badges and Courage Crowns to recognise times they can be brave and practise trying new activities with support. They also designed and exchanged Friendship Bracelets, reinforcing what it means to be a good friend while practising sharing and taking turns.

Additionally, each child created a Helping Hand, reflecting on times when people might need help and how it feels to help and be helped. These activities have encouraged creativity, confidence, and positive relationships while supporting key social and emotional objectives

BLUE CLASS

Tone and texture!

Blue class have been exploring texture and tone in art. We have been inspired by the work of Nicola McBride and Sarah Graham and, using colouring pencils, have created bright and bold pictures. Different shading techniques helped us to create a 3D effect as we considered how the tone is affected by light and shadow.
